DETAILED ACTION

1. A copy of a foreign document has been received.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1-31 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Porter et al. (USPN 5889945).

Regarding claims 1, 7, 11, 14, 18, 20, 25 and 30, Porter teaches a host system, which transfers the necessary information to one or more end points allowing the endpoints display. Porter teaches an attendee bar (611) including multiple panels (613) each of which displays an identifier (614). In addition Porter teaches an attendee bar record (702) with respect to a window identifier (707). However, Porter does not specifically teach a control signal output section and an image signal transfer section. Porter on the other hand teaches a signal generation device (337) for the purpose of outputting, and an interface unit (338) allowing the system (300) to communicate by sending and receiving video, audio as well as data signals. Porter also teaches the interface unit is processes other necessary control signals. See col. 5, lines 50-67, Fig 3, col. 4, lines 1-8, Fig 6b, and Fig 7.

In addition, Porter teaches a display device (332) used with a computer system that can be LCD or any other display mechanisms suitable for creating graphic images and alphanumeric characters. See col. 6, lines 1-5 and Fig 3. Porter further teaches applications being shared between multiple systems and being executed at all of the endpoints. See col. 4, lines 9-20.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize the signal generation device (337) and system (300) communication for the purpose of outputting signals and exchanging signals respectively. One would have been motivated in view of Porter that the desired functions of a control signal output section and an image signal transfer section can be equivalently performed by the signal generation device (337) and system communication (300) respectively.

Regarding claims 2, 8 and 10, Porter teaches a signal generation device, which may be, coupled with system I/O bus 331 along with other elements including display device (323). See Fig 3.

Regarding claim 3, Porter teaches four states of indicators of a panel one of which is a hidden state holding a space for the indicator. See col. 11, lines 1-17 and Fig 6E.

Regarding claims 4-6, 9, 12, 15, 19, 21, 24, 26-29 and 31, Porter teaches a window (612) including an attendee bar (611) that contains multiple panels (613) each of which displays an identifier (614). See Fig 6B. Porter also teaches that each panel can include one or more menus and can be selected, displaying the attendee bar and menu. Porter also teaches that a panel can be a bit map showing the image of the participant. See col. 11, lines 18-27.

Regarding claims 13 and 16, see Fig 3 (302, 303).

Regarding claim 17, Porter teaches the use of a memory controller (322) in connection with a display device (323).

Art Unit: 2674

Regarding claim 22, Porter teaches a display device (332) of various types including LCD. See col. 6, lines 1-5.

Regarding claim 23, Porter teaches the use of application specific information, specific controls or commands in connection with the panels. See col. 3, lines 8-13.
